Something Is Different On the Streets of Hanoi Ambitious Reinvigoration Attempt Brings Vietnamese Type of Glasnost

By Keith B. Richburg

Washington Post Service HANOI — The sights and sounds of what people here refer to as Vietnam's version of glamost are surfacing in this Communist capital and the surrounding countryside.

In moves likened to the openness campaign of the Soviet leader, Mikhail S. Gorbachev, Hanoi's new leaders have embacked on an ambitious effort to reinvigorate a country hurt by economic decline and political malaise.

In the process, they hope to reverse more than four decades of an entrenched war mentality, marked by secretiveness, suspicion of outsiders and fear of openly expressing criticism.

The effort, led by the party general secretary, Nguyen Van Linh, has included the liberalization of the country's economy and its political debate, as well as a greater tolerance for Western ideas and fads.

After a meeting of the National Assembly last month, for example, Western journalists were permitted to do something that is extraordinary in Victnam: conduct man-on-thestreet interviews to determine public reaction to the choice of a new president and a new state plant. Mr. Linh — like Mr. Gorbachev in Moscow - has come to personify the drive for reform.

At 71, he has been cutting a more modern - and more human - profile lately, posing for photographs while swinging in a backyard hammock and doing his morning exercise.

These first impressions of Vietnam as a country in transi-tion emerged during a two-week visit to Hanoi, Ho Chi Minh City and surrounding provinces. The trip was agreed to in line with the country's decision to allow more visits by Western journalists.

From Villain to Victim: North's Triumph

By Haynes Johnson New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - Not since General Douglas MacArthur's return to the United States in 1951 after he was dismissed by President Harry S. Truman for insubordination during the Korean War has a military officer had such dramatic effect on the nation as Lieutenant Colonel Oliver L. North.

For six days of emotionally draining and revealing testimony, Colonel North's personality, performance, tactics, values, beliefs and actions have been examined and cross-examined - in the congressional hearing room and by Americans all over the country.

Unraveling a Legacy of Mathematics Decades Later, Indian Clerk's Genius Dazzles Theorists

By James Gleick

New York Times Service NEW YORK - In some ways, mathematicians are finally beginning to penetrate the mind of Srinivasa

One hundred years have passed since Ramanujan (rah-MAH-nuh-jun) was born in the small city of Kumbakonam in southern India. When he died, 32 years later, he left a strange, raw legacy: about 4,000 formulas written in three notebooks and on some Some of the power and originality of Ramanujan's mathematics was understood a few years before his death. His contemporaries saw from the theorems scrawled across his pages that he possessed a genius for calculating the hidden laws and relationships that govern the wilderness of numbers. But Ramanujan was uneducated in standard mathematics and isolated by geography for most of his productive life. Often his formulas seemed as obscure as they were elegant. He worked in a place and a way of his own, drawing his formulas and theorems from a mental landscape far from the frontier of mathematics as seen in his day. Now his work is flowing into mathematics and science more deeply than could have been imagined a understand the formulas and prove them and learn more of why Ramanujan chose certain paths, they sense a foundation that has not yet been revealed. "When he pulled extraordinary objects out of the air, they weren't just curiosities but they were the right things," said Jonathan M. Borwein of Dalhousie University, in Halifax, Nova Scotia. "They are chusive evidence of a theory that's lurking around somewhere that he never made explicit," said Mr. Borwein, one of many mathematicians who have lately focused on Ramanujan's formulas. The trail is hard to follow.

Using a slate, Ramanujan jotted down formulas, erased them with his elbow, jotted down more, and then recorded a result in a notebook only when it had reached final form.

The intermediate results — the links of the chain are lost. Unlike mainstream mathematicians, he felt no need to prove that a result was true. His legacy is simply a set of discoveries.

"He seems to have functioned in a way unlike anybody else we know of," Mr. Borwein said. "He had such a feel for things that they just flowed out of his Press reports have quoted Japanese officials as suggesting that the United States was exaggerating the damage caused by the Toshiba sale. According to one senior Foreign Ministry official, opposition party politicians have complained that the Japanese government was be-ing too conciliatory. Toshiba had planned to submit a bid to provide lap-top computers for the Pentagon, but a spokesman for the company said that Toshiba had not yet decided to submit a bid, given the uproar over the Toshiba affair.

Nevertheless, Mr. Aoi said that the Defense Department had very recently asked Toshiba if it could make the lap-top computers in the United States, because U.S. sanctions imposed during a semiconductor dispute with Japan require large tariffs on imports of lap-top

Soviet Assails Western Plan on Arms

VIENNA (Renters) - The Soviet Union said Tuesday that a longawaited Western proposal on disarmament at the European security conference had major failings, but said it formed a basis for negotiation. The Soviet ambassador. Yuri B. Kashlev, said that the Western-proposal presented Friday "could result in simply freezing force levels in Europe." He added: "This is insufficient. We propose drastic reductions."

But Mr. Kashlev said the presentation of the Western proposal meant a basis has been created for drafting the military-political section of the concluding document of the Vienna meeting. The Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, which began in November, is expected to end late this year.

House Narrowly Backs Smoking Ban On Most Flights but Bill Faces Hurdles

WASHINGTON—The House of Representatives has word to ban smoking on all domestic aidine flights of two hours or less.

The ban, approved Monday night, 198-193, was contained in any amendment to an $11 billion transportation appropriations bill form

The ban would affect 80 percent of all U.S. airline flights, according to the Federal Aviation Administration.

However, the amendment must still be adopted by the Senate-where it will face opposition from several powerful lobbies. The demand has increased along with the number of civil lawsuits, the size of jury awards, and the role of technical information in such suits. WASHINGTON - Shirley Moore, who spent two years in Washington as Michael K. Deaver's secretary before returning to California, speaks with the perspective of a continent's distance. Of course Mr. Deaver went through changes when he was deputy chief of staff in the White House, she said, "It would be very hard for anybody in the world to work there and not change."

In 1981, as the national press corps began to sort out the new ministration, Mr. Deaver was identified as "the keeper of the body," the ultimate loyal aide.

Helms's Favorite Gang

A Texas nurse named Kindra Bryan, who had gone to Mozambique to do relief work, was abducted by rebels in May. Senator Jesse Heims, a champion of Renamo, the Mozambican rebel group, took the occasion to press his campaign to induce the State Department to take up the Renamo cause.

Call the Howard University professor who is Renamo's local representative, Senator Heims told a State Department official on June 24, and "you'll get your hostage re-leased in five minutes." Three days later, the department's Mozambique desk officer reached the professor, Luis Serapiao. Yet Kindra Bryan remains a Renamo prisoner.

More is at stake than Mr. Helms's emberrassment at the hands of a group that enjoys his political favor. For almost a year, he has been conducting an "abduction" of another sort, holding up the confirmation of a veteran diplomat, Melissa Wells, as President Reagan's ambassador to Mozambique. His purpose is to defy the official policy of attempting to pry Mozambique from its ear-lier embrace of Marxist philosophy and Sovi-et alliance. For Mr. Helms it is enough that Renamo is anti-Communist. "Until you treat all freedom fighters in the world the same," he told the State Department, "you're going to have problems with me."

Since the U.S. government aids Jonas Savimbi's UNITA guerrillas in Angola, the question is asked, why not also aid Renamo in Mozambique? It is a fair point. In fact, it is a mistake to go with the guerrillas, and thereby become a partner of South Africa, in either place. In Angola, the presence of Cuban troops defending the government eventually overcame the administration's initial unwillingness to make common cause with Pretoria. In Mozambique, the absence of a Cuban factor has let Mr. Reagan keep his distance from Renamo. But his policy, though firmly supported in the State Department, is under pressure from conservative elements not just in Congress but in other executive departments. They present the recent working-level State contact with Renamo's representative in Washington as a harbinger of sweeping policy change.

Washington has worked to offer the Mozambican government more security and more development than it could expect from Moscow. The results are measurable and constitute one of the few successes for the policy known as constructive engagement. Senator Helms would throw this away by having the United States switch horses and back his favorite gang of kidnappers.

North on the Ticket?

Where do the Republican presidential candidates stand on Oliver North? The television anchorman Dan Rather said that he had telegrams promoting a Jack Kemp-Oliver North ticket, and Senator Bob Dole asked at the recent Young Republicans conference in Scattle — "jokingly," a spokesman insists — "What would you think of a Dole-North ticket?" The audience, full of enthusiasm for the colonel, cheered, and most of the Republican candi-dates have been similarly upbeat about Lieutenant Colonel North. But we note that all references to Colonel North on the national ticket still out him in the second spot.

Vice President George Bush, because of his work on anti-terrorism policy, seems to have had closer contact with Oliver North than any of the other Republicans. He called Colonel North when the colonel was fired Nov. 25 and "wished him well," but said that he and Admiral John Poindetter should have waived the Fifth Amendment and testified before the intelligence committees. Just be-fore the North testimony began, however, he insisted that "North is going to come out far better than some of his severest critics."

Mr. Bush's enthusiasm is exceeded, it appears, by some of his competitors'. Represcattative Kemp, who was eagerly defending the president when the Iran-contra story broke in November, now feels that the North testimony provides stronger support for the president and the Nicaraguan contras than they have received for years - an inferential other contra aid supporters, including Mr. Kemp himself. Paul Laxalt sees Colonel North as, in Mr. Reagan's words, "a national hero," a man who has risked his life for his country and who has provided the clearest articulation of the contra aid policy. The Reverend Pat Robertson, who was once briefed by Colonel North, phoned him after he was fired and told him he had gotten "a raw deal." As for "that little arms caper," Mr. Robertson said on his 700 Club television broadcast last winter, "North wouldn't have done anything except under orders."

Standing back and taking a more cautious stand have been Bob Dole and Pierre du Pont. As Senate Republican leader, Mr. Dole was instrumental in setting up the special Senate committee and in choosing its mem-bers. Earlier this month he described Colonel North as "a loose cannon," but, mixing the metaphor, predicted "no smoking gun." Mr. du Pont, a vehement supporter of sid for the contras, said last week that Colonel North "did what he felt was right and [helping the contras] is a policy I agree with." But the former Delaware governor added that if Colonel North broke the law, "he will be brought before the system of justice," and said he reserves judgment until all the testi-mony is in — a suitable note of caution amid the jaunty enthusiasm that risks overlooking the serious mistakes Colonel North has been convicted by his own testimony of making.

Health insurers deserve less sympathy when they insist on the right to test applicants and to deny coverage to those infected with the AIDS virus. AIDS patients without health insurance must first exhaust their savings, so that as paupers they can qualify for Medicaid, the government's medical program for the poor. The more humane course is to bar health insurers from testing for the AIDS virus.

Some health insurers warn that the projected cost of the AIDS epidemic will destroy their business. They cite a basic principle of insurance: People at equal risk should pay equal premiums. Carriers of the AIDS virus, being at higher risk, should not be subsidized by others. Bank clerks and trapeze artists do not belong in the same pool.

A second principle, say insurers, is that insurance cannot be bought against an event that has already become likely. A house in the path of a forest fire cannot be insured; neither should a person already infected with the AIDS virus.

These are compelling arguments — in theory. In practice, most health insurance customers are not screened or tested, even though increasingly refined modern tests could identify many different risks. Insurers do not bother to make these distinctions cast out to bear their burden alone. because most people are insured, through

But the wolf is real, say the private insurers, or soon will be, with the total health insurance costs of AIDS expected to reach $10 billion a year by 1991. Maybe, but if that is more than they can handle, their actuaries could file requests for rate increases with state insurance departments. So far none have. New York's department has now rightly joined California in denying use of the AIDS antibody test as a screen for health insurance.

The cost of AIDS could become less manageable for insurers if, for example, many employers should start to self-insure or somehow exclude AIDS virus carriers. But the insurers' fear of imminent rain is overstated. In some states they are already forbidden to test for diseases that affect only certain groups, like sickle-cell anemia and Tsy-Sachs. # Germany Holds Tight to a Drifting West

HAMBURG — There was a time when those committed to European progress could welcome the fact that Frenchmen were worrying about Germany. After all, the fear that the neigh-bor across the Rhine might shift toward neutralium, however unjustified, at least prompted greater readiness in Paris to work more closely with Bonn. In the early 1980s, when West Germany was shaken by the vehement debate over Euromissiles, France, under President François Mitternand, over-

Even the more suspicions Frenchmen, however, subsequently discovered that there never had been a there are still obstacles to signing such an accord soon. The talks seemingly gained new momentum in April after the Soviet real threat of West German neutralism. When the Bonn parliament in November 1983 voted to deploy Union addressed the issues that the U.S. side had asserted were hamperthe Pershing-2 and the cruise missile on West Cer-man territory, much of the public protest collapsed. So the sense of urgency for building a stronger French-German entente receded. Politics went back to business as usual. In Paris, attention turned to the ing an agreement. But now the mo-mentum is in jeopardy because of new destructive conditions that the American side is trying to insert into coming elections, and in Bonn, consolidating public the guidelines reached at Reykjavík. finances was regarded as more important than consolidating French-German cooperation. Since then,

One serious stumbling block is the U.S. insistence on the right to convert Pershing-2 missiles into shorter-range Pershing-1Bs rather than elimi-nate them. This could give the Ameri-cans a pretent to dain they were cans a pretent to claim they were eliminating medium-range missiles in Europe. But the reverse process would be just as simple. destroy its medium-range cruise mis-siles in Europe. The Americans suggest now that the problem can be solved by removing their warheads or by transferring those missiles to battle-ships near Europe. But that would make a phantom of the agreement to rid Europe of medium-range missiles.

Another important issue is the standing U.S. proposal that the Soviet Union should reduce and dismantic its missiles unilaterally while the United States monitors us. At the same time, the U.S. arrenal would remain intact. and our inspectors would not be al-hardly be called a "true zero" level. I am sure Washington would make the same argument if Moscow decided to store some warheads in an East European country for its own or another country's missiles. Thus, the American insistence on keeping 72 U.S. war-heads for use on West German missiles poses a serious problem. In addition, Washington's draft agreement allows the development of new types of intermediate-range maclear weapons, but only for the United States, while forbidding the develop-ment of a ground-launched cruise missile for us. The Americans want to deploy their remaining Pershing-2 missiles in Alaska, thus increasing the nuclear threat to Soviet territory with-

be deployed west of the 80th meridian in the Fastern Hemisphere, thereby preventing the missiles from reaching Western Europe, Our medium-range missiles would also not be able to reach U.S. territory. So why does the United States insist on deploying Pershing-2s in Alaska?

Reports about future American and allied programs to modernize and build up nuclear arms stocks make us apprehensive. Under the guise of preserving the U.S. "nuclear guarantees" to Western Europe, the United States is planning to increase the number of submarine-launched cruise missiles, to deploy more bomb-ers and atomic artillery and to en-hance the range of Lance missiles.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies are trying to undermine the possible agreement in another way — through an endless chain of inkages. After we removed the issue of shorter-range misales, they started to talk about tactical and battlefield nuclear weapons, then even about conventional arms and troops.

The response of Warsaw Pact na-tions to those linkages has been known for a long time: All existing asymmetries should be dealt with decisively through reductions by the side that is ahead to establish equal, low levels of troops and arms. Those levels should be sufficient for defense but should exclude any possibility to conduct offensive operations. Such issues, together with remaining tactical nuclear weapons, could be considered at separate multilateral talks.

From the Soviet perspective, all intermediate-range missiles in Enrope should be eliminated.

We are ready for a "global zero" option — the elimination of all U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range weap-ons—provided that American nuclear weapons in the Far East are taken into account, including those in Japan, the Philippines and South Korea, and that the U.S. carrier-based force in the Pacific be removed beyond certain agreed on boundaries.

The possibility for elimination of intermediate-range weapons is ripe, and we do not want to miss this chance. Why postpone it until the next U.S. administration comes to office? Nobody can guarantee that a similar opportunity will arise again. We are convinced that the agree-ment on elimination of intermediaterange nuclear forces in Europe, together with an agreement on key clements of a 50 percent reduction of strategic nuclear weapons and a ban on space weapons, could provide a solid basis for a future U.S. Soviet summit meetine. But what is a solid basis for a future U.S. Soviet summit meetine. But what is a solid basis for a future U.S. Soviet summit meetine. cion of yesterday is being replaced by destructive suspicion: Mr. Jobert's advice amounts to nothing less than a warning for France (and others) to beware of those shifty Germans.

It is, to put it undiplomatically, a phony argoment, in fact and in thought. If Mr. lobert, as he came its residual Gaullist inhibitions and sought to strengthen West Germany's links with the West through closer cooperation seems on the ones he claims to views from the ones he claims to views from the ones he claims to the ones he claims Far from clamoring for reunification or moving away from the West in pursuit of a nebulous national unity. West German editorial writers and politicians have emphasized, practically in unison, that the democratic freedom of West Germany is much more important than national unity for all Germans. The only truly neutralist party in the spectrum of West German politics, the Green party, has stood out by advocating that Bonn formally renounce any notion of reunification and formally renounce any notion of reunification and change the constitution accordingly.

The problem is not the fantisty of a West German swing so the East. It is that, if nothing is done to move West European political unity forward, the Western framework in which West Germany has found its place will gradually but surely disintegrate — to the detriment of West Germany above all, but also of the rest of Europe. ing castward is apparently still alive and kicking in the French political salons. Unfortunately, it no longer serves as the incentive for closer cooperation but rather as a justification for old-time all, but also of the rest of Europe.

What is worrying is Euro-latigue, both in Bonn and Paris. There is too little realization in Bonn that West Germany, in order to ensure its security and prosperity, must invest in the political future of Western Europe. True, all the major parties in Boan declare themsalves devoted to West European unity. But when it comes to the crunch, the farm vote or the next local elections are always more important than the future of Europe. In this respect, too, West Germany has become a normal country.

There is also mertis in France French politicians are busily preparing for next year's presidential elections. They have little time, and even less vision, to build the future political framework for Europe. Yet Prance has always been the country best equipped to launch a European initiative. best equipped to launch a European initiative. Now it lacks both the will and the perspective. Instead, if Mr. Jobert's arguments are any guide, it may even be tempted to make a virtue of inadequacy by pretending that inertia, far from being a mistake, is the best policy. For it permits France to remain true to her Gaullist calling, and free of any entanglement with the military integration of NATO or the neighbor to the east.

If such thinking should become respectable in Paris, the danger is not that Germany will, as Mr. Jobert puts it, "go its own way in Mitteleuropa." There is no such desire in West Germany today. Rather, the risk lies elsewhere: West Germany in a decaying Europe, will be a state admit, not by choice but by circumstance.

To remain anchored to the West, we Germans

To remain anchored to the West, we German To remain anchored to the west, we Germans will, of course, have to make efforts of our own. But we will also need the support of our friends. The only condition under which Mr. Jobert's fantasy might become self-fulling is if the governments to which he appeals should share his suspicious and follow his shortsighted advice.

Gulf: An Unlikely Pair Comes Knocking at the UN

WASHINGTON — Beneath the W Reagan administration's plan to take Kuwaiti tankers under American wing, a broader, more political and more positive Gulf policy is struggling to get out. The interesting and frome thing about it is that an dministration described in both friendly and critical rhetoric as determined to assert American power on its own is moving to a policy based increasingly on working through and with the United Nations.

This comes about not simply through the frustration of American initiatives but, in the first instance, through an unusual overlap of short-term Soviet and American interests. The two superpowers are ready to temper their fundamental rivalry for Third World regional influence to a point to achieve their separate ends: to calm the Gulf, to hold or rebuild a relationship with both Iran and Iraq, and in particular to ensure that a rampant fundamentalist Iran does not win the war: But this is not the only reason the Reagan administration goes to the United Nations. In a key aspect of superpower competition in the Gulf, Moscow suddenly has an ad-

Why, then, does Mikhail Gorbachev not proceed with a second-Tashkent? Because the Soviet reach is not all that great and because the Kremlin wants to defuse the current crisis lest the United States use it to achieve "long-harbored plans" of building up its military presence in a region on the Soviet doorstep. The U.S. government would like to be able to threaten Iran with an arms embargo if, as expected, Iran rejects the council call for negotiation and if Mr. Perez de Cueilar fails to generate support at least for a full in the fighting. But it seems that an embergo remains a long shot. Too many countries sell arms to lean or have political besitations...

All this leaves President Research moving toward the reflaging. My sense is that having started it, he should go through with it and meanwhile try to use the new dynamic of joint Soviet-American urgency to switch the focus off the navigation issue, which is a diversion, and to bear down on getting something political going through the United Nations. While he is at it, he might make sure that his government, which ligs unconsciona-bly on its UN dues, pays up in full. The Washington Post.

The 'Loony Left' Blunders On How to Help the Koreans

By Charles Krauthammer

WASHINGTON — A quiz: Who is a particularly burn rap because, whatever the author of the "Democracy in its other errors (now being broadcast live south Konna Archivelle (1998) Reason foreign South Korea Act of 1987? Roh Tae on national television), Reagan foreign Woo, chairman of the ruling party in policy under Mr. Shultz has taken the South Korea, who dramatically acceded notion of democratization very seriously. ised a democratic transition?

No, the "Democracy in South Korea central to American polic Act" is the work of four U.S. senators called the Third World. (Kennedy, Kerry, Harkin and Mikulski) who, on June 18, in the midst of the South Korean riots, introduced a bill to bring the blessings of democracy to South Korea by means of a range of American economic sanctions.

The legislation was stillborn. It was never passed, and by the time it would have gone into effect, the dictatorship had already pledged to dismantle itself. But the bill remains: a curiosity, a his-torical artifact of Democratic liberalism circa 1987. And for future legislative 'archaeologists, it illustrates perfectly three of its enduring characteristics: First, a touching and grandiose belief (consider only the name, the "Democracy in South Korea Act") in the power of the United States to redeem the politics of benighted lands by means of well-intended resolutions of Congress. Second, an unerring resort to a single instrument economic sanctions — as the solution to foreign-policy conundrums. And third, a very mean-edged partisan style.

When Senator Edward Kennedy introduced his bill, he denounced the administration's "contempt for the strug-gle for democracy in other lands," adding, "We have learned to our regret in Congress that quiet diplomacy in this administration means no diplomacy." Within 12 days, Mr. Kennedy had to eat his words. Quiet diplomacy had now turned into "effective diplomacy" which, Mr. Kennedy was forced to con-cede on June 30, had helped bring about the near-miraculous outcome in Seoul. But Mr. Kennedy's complaints were ill-tempered 12 days earlier, even before events refuted him. "The secretary of state." Mr. Kennedy had charged, "instead of forthrightly calling for steps toward democracy, urges restraint and tilts toward the regime." Wrong on all counts. Secretary George Shultz did call for steps toward democracy. He did not tilt toward the regime. And calling for restraint while riots are taking place in 12 crues is hardly an offense.

Moreover, Mr. Shultz had called for steps toward democracy long before the student riots provided a backdrop for grandstanding. On Feb. 6, Assistant Secretary of State Gaston Sigur deliv-ered a speech calling for Koreans to begin "permanently 'civilianizing' their politics" (that is, for an end to military rule) and urging a transition to "a more open and legitimate political system."

The contempt-for-democracy charge is 10 virtually all popular demands for democracy? President Chun Doo Hwan, row Wilson attempted a parchment verto make the promotion of democracy central to American policy in what is now

The policy is twofold. The Reagan Doctrine pledges American help to those trying to overthrow Communist dictatorships. What has been called the corollary to the Reagan Doctrine pledges American help to those trying to democratize non-Communist, often pro-American dictatorships. The latter is not a theoretical exercise. In 18 months, the United States has had to move decisively in Haiti, the Philip-pines and South Korea. It is now chal-lenged again in Panama, where the administration finds itself arrayed against the current dictator. For its efforts, the administration has earned a storing of the U.S. Embassy in Panama City and an Ostentations tête à tête between Panama's dictator; Manuel Antonio Noriega, and his Nicaraguan counterpart, Daniel Ortega Saavedra. They jointly denounced U.S. interference in the internal affairs of Central American countries.

Interfering in others' internal affairs to promote democracy is not an easy sell domestically, either. On the one hand, some conservatives argue that a zeal for democracy can only destabilize friendly countries. The answer is simple: You do not blindly threaten or weaken regimes where there exists no democratic alternative. What the United States can do, short run, U.S. and Soviet interests in the and has done with fair success in three area coincide." ## Where Luck Ends, We Need Government

WASHINGTON — A staple of the W stories written by Horatio Alger is sheer, wonderful luck. Our Hero stops a runeway horse and carriage. The frightened and, of course, grateful, passenger happens to be the beautiful of mostly poor kids in 15 cities have been daughter of a rich man. Our Hero is on adopted by wealthy individuals. And it his way to material success. He is industrious and brave. But mostly he is to these students, Drop-out rates are lowlucky. The passenger could have been er than usual and an astounding number the ugly daughter of a poor man.

That element of luck, undeniably important in anyone's life, is nevertheless essentially unfair. On a given day, a child will be born to poor ghetto parents and another will come into the world heir to a fortune. To a modest degree, we count on government to inject some equity into fortune to attend a school adopted by a life's unfair situations. Education is one wealthy person. So some kids have their area where we expect it to do so.

But luck - the sheer luck of birth and, even, of location — now plays an even greater role in a child's chances of getting a good education and, especially, of going to college. Nothing illustrates that better than the exemplary work of Eugene Lang, a millionaire industrialist. Six years ago, he promised a class of New York sixth-graders, all of them poor, that if they could get to college, he would pay for it. Thirty of the original 59 students appear ready to take up his offer. They are college-bound.

Mr. Lang's idea has been copied. Recently, a Philadelphia stockbroker and his wife amounced they would pay the college tuition of 116 ghetto kids, all of them now in the sixth grade. A Virginia real-estate developer has made a similar

By Richard Cohen

offer to students at a Washington elementary school. In fact, more than 100 classes of them seem headed for college.

But this is really a Horatio Alger story in its best and worst sense. For the kids, the key element is luck - the sheer good wealthy person. So some kids have their college tuition paid for while others, maybe a block away, do not.

MEANWHILE

The Lang approach has been widely, even lavishly, praised. This is an example, we are told, of that most wonderful of all things — private initiative. The praise is not just a reflection of conservative yahooism. Most of the wealthy people who have put up their money for college tuitions have become involved with the schools they adopted and the kids who attend them. They counsel, they mediate, they encourage. Nothing takes the place of a person who cares.

But nothing — not even good-hearted millionaires — can substitute for government's obligation to offer what some kids receive by sheer luck. Over the last six years, the Reagan administration has cut the federal higher education budget by about $3 billion. What remains mostly are loans which, for the poor, are often daunting. Outright stipends for poor students, the so-called Pell Grants. are limited to $2,100 a year - hardly sufficient to cover the cost of room and board that often exceeds $10,000 a year. In an era in which the cost of obtaining a higher education has zoomed, the federal budget for it has been cut.

Much has been made recently of competition and productivity. America's ability to compete internationally reflects many factors, but certainly one of them is education. The administration has met this national crisis with words. exhortation and bromides, such as the need to teach values. At the same time, it has attempted to gut the Head Start program for pre-schoolers and has made it harder for all but the affluent to send their kids to college. The most important resource the nation has is the minds of the people. It is renewable. Unlike, say, copper or oil, it cannot be depleted unless it is allowed to be. Tragically, we are allowing it to be. Mr. Lang and other good people have moved to fill a financial void that should not exist in the first place. A student's higher education should not depend on the benevolence of an alumnus or the charitable caprice of a wealthy person who may later turn to other interests or run out of money. Even in an era of limited government, when it comes to education, Horatio Alger stories are not uplifting. They're tragic. The Washington Post.

State Restaurants

PRAGUE - The state will lease restaurants to private operators starting next year as part of an attempt to end government subsidies to the businesses, the newspaper Rude Pravo said Tuesday.

Reporting on measures ap-proved Monday by the presiding of the Communist Party, Rude Pravo also said that "incentives for staff in catering establishments to improve the level of catering and the achieved economic results will be increased."

It is required that deficits in this branch be removed in the course of the coming year," it added. Ac-cording to the official news agency CIK, the state-owned catering op-crations lost $8.2 million last year.

Earnings Lift NYSE to Record

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatche NEW YORK - Prices on the New York Stock Exchange reached record levels Tuesday, buoyed by positive earnings news, especially from high technology groups.

The Dow Jones industrial average climbed 28.38 points to close at 2.481.35, above the record 2,463.97 set July 8. The closely watched index fell 3.02 points Monday.

Advances led declines by a 2 to 1 ratio. Closing volume totaled around 185.85 million shares, above Monday's 152.8 million.

shares, above Monday's 152.8 million.

"All I'm seeing is buyers," said Brad Weeks, senior vice president in charge of sales and trading at Donaldson Lufkin & Jenrette.

Good corporate earnings news helped drive the market higher. So far this week, Apple Computer, NCR, Honeywell, Intel and Admission Million Desires have recorded improved. vanced Micro Devices have reported improved earnings.

Traders cited a prediction from the widely followed technical analyst, Robert Prechte that if the Dow moved through "resistance" at 2,471, it will climb to 2,600.

But Robert Ritter, technical analyst at L.F. Rothschild, said the market has also gone up Rothschild, said the market has also gone up simply because everyone thought it was going to go down. "The market has been consistently perverse," said Mr. Ritter.

A pivotal factor for the market, said Jack Baker, head of equity trading at Shearson Lehman Brothers, is the May U.S. trade figure due Wednesday, which Wall Street economists are estimating at $13 billion to 13.5 billion.

"If the figure comes in at $11 billion, the wanced Micro Devices eased is to 13%.

In a single 30-second television commercial from Levine, Huntley, Schmidt & Beaver, a bearded hippie of the late 1960s proclaims: "Who needs money, man?" A teletyped note that clatters across the bottom of the screen shows him to be today's president of Bio-Tech Lasers with a personal worth of $3 million. A frantic female from a 1970s demonstration is today's headmis-tress of the Little Lady Charm School in Westport, Connecticut. For a parting shot, a near chap in white shift and bases turns out to be doing three to five years in prison for insider trading.

Armed with research data from Yankelovich Clancy Shulman, Nicholas H. Niles, the publisher of Changing Times, noted that there was a great change in the American people from the 1970s to the 1980s. In that earlier time, he said, the feeling was: "I can have it all. Money comes easily.

More recently, he said: "People began to lack confidence. They feel that they can't compete with the Japanese, that their children are going to be worse off than they were. There is a change in the population's outlook and the way they deal with things. To feel more secure, what they needed was information."

Changing Times, which recently delebrated its 40th anniversary with a circulation of 1.35 million last year carried 624 pages of advertising, up from 491 in 1985.

IBM Net Off 9.8%, Sales Up

Drop in Quarter Depresses Shares

NEW YORK - International Business Machines Corp. said Tuesday that its earnings had fallen 9.8 percent in the second quarter to $1.178 billion, disappointing inves-tors who knocked more than $2 off its share price.

The decline from $1.305 billion in the corresponding 1986 quarter was the computer giant's fifth straight quarterly drop, confound-ing recent speculation that earnings might improve. On a per-share basis, net earnings fell to $1.95 from $2.12 in the 1986 second quarter, despite a 4.3 percent rise in revenue to $12.80 billion from $12.27 billion.

Some analysts had expected IBM's earnings to be even lower, at $1.85 a share, according to Institu-tional Brokers Estimate Service, compiled by Lynch, Jones & Ryan.

But in recent weeks Wall Street had grown increasingly optimistic about IBM's prospects, especially for its Personal System/2, a new family of personal computers that the company said was selling well. IBM's stock price fell $2.375 to close at $167.50 in heavy trading on the New York Stock Exchange. "People were expecting too much, too soon," said Stephen Smith of PaineWebber.

Despite the earnings decline, some of the gloom that has afflicted IBM since mid-1985 has lifted. Analysts have given the company high marks for regaining lost ground in the personal and minicomputer markets, increasing revenue from software and maintenance services, and keeping costs in line.

Rick Martin of Sanford C. Berntein & Co. said Wall Street anslysts were hoping for a better per-formance. "Everybody had their fingers crossed," he said. But, Mr. Martin added, the generally lackluster second-quarter figures do not foreshadow a poor showing for the remainder of 1987. "We continue to feel the turnsround in earnings will start in the second half," (Reuters, AP, UPI)

Stock Boom Tests Asian Exchanges Markets Wrestling With Home-Grown Restrictions

By Patrick L. Smith

BANGKOK -- Not much more than a year ago, the only thing that seemed to stir brokers at the Securities Exchange of Thailand was the arrival of a foreign visitor: With no apparent sense of the absurd, they would team up with floor clerks to demonstrate what trading would be like, if only

Similarly, the Korea Stock Exchange was some-thing of a local joke when it completed a vast, computerized home for itself in the early 1980s. After a few desultory transactions at the opening bell, it would have been possible to play volleybal on the trading floor without much interruption. But for these two exchanges and many others in East Asia, things are dramatically different now. In line with a worldwide trend, the region's emerging stock markets have attracted unpreced amounts of local and overseas capital

Yet the sudden influx of capital has forced every small exchange in the region to confront inadequa-cies that could either retard growth to some extent or increase the risk of a sudden collapse.

Trading volume, in some cases, has increased as much as fivefold from 1986 levels. Market indexes have risen up to 120 percent in the same period. Exchanges once begging for business are now overflowing. In Kuela Lumpur, for instance, the average daily turnover has risen to about 50 million ringgit ($19.61 million at current exchange rates) from 11 million ringgit in the past year.

Just before opening a larger, partially computerized trading floor two months ago, the Kuala Lumpur Stock Exchange cut half an hour from its daily trading time. "There was just too much activity," said Nik Mohamed Din, the exchange's

In many respects, the blossoming of East Asia's small markets is the fulfillment of an ambition long cherished by government officials in the re-gion, as well as brokers, traders, international fund managers and development experts. Asia's "eco-nomic miracle," they have often argued, has been too often financed by debt rather than equity, leaving corporations throughout the region over-borrowed and financial systems underdeveloped.

The desire to reduce a traditional dependence in Asia on commercial bank credits has been especially pronounced over the past several years, as nations such as South Korea, Malaysia, the Philip-pines and Thailand have reached the prudent limit on their ability to generate the hard currency to repay their loans.

The exchanges themselves are tiny: Taken together they amount to about $130 billion in capitalization, a fraction of the roughly $2.7 trillion each for stock markets in the United States and Japan. Nonetheless, many analysts predict that Asia's junior bourses, along with the more mature Hong Kong exchange, will become global leaders for return on investment.

The International Finance Corp., a World Bank affiliate that has been instrumental in nurturing capital markets in developing countries, predicted

U.S. Retail Sales Rose a Sluggish 0.4% in June

WASHINGTON - U.S. retail difference. sales rose a smaller-than-expected 0.4 percent in June, with virtually all of the increase coming from auto purchases, the Commerce Department said Tuesday.

Economic forecasters had expected sales to rise 0.5 percent to flat sales reports to reluctance by 0.7 percent during the month. It was the fourth straight month of virtually unchanged sales. Retail sales have moved less than 0.5 percent up or down since February. Total sales in the first half of this year slipped 0.1 percent from the final six months of 1986, a sign that consumers' free-spending ways have ended and a hint of continued sluggish growth in the economy.

The weak growth is causing fears of recession because consumer spending accounts for about two-thirds of U.S. economic activity. After the June figures were re-leased, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said consumer spending was unlikely to be the major driving force for economic growth this year.

"Total real personal cons

tion spending probably rose" in the April to June quarter after two quarterly declines, he said in Washington. "Consumers should continne to lift their spending modestly, but they will not provide the economy's driving force this year."

The 0.4 percent increase compared with May's revised 0.3 percent drop in sales, originally re-ported as a 0.6 percent fall. The June figures also were up 4.5

percent from a year earlier, but sales were well below their record of $129 billion last September. After accounting for seasonal factors, the government estimated that retail sales totaled $125.1 bil-ion in June, up $531 million from

May. Sales of durable goods, or items made to last three or more years, increased 0.8 percent to account for $48.1 billion of June's total.

Auto dealers enjoyed the most success of that group, with sales rising 1.9 percent to $28.1 billion. That increase came despite a de-cline in sales of U.S.-made cars from a year earlier. Higher sticker prices or a tendency to buy more

Sales of nondurable goods went up 0.1 percent to total a seasonally adjusted $76.97 billion. Clothing stores posted the only substantial gain, 2.4 percent. Economists have attributed the consumers to purchase such major items as cars and furniture while they carry record high debt levels and personal income is growing weakly. (UPI, AP, Reuters)

At World Bank. Reserves Expected To Eat Up Profit

WASHINGTON - The World Bank's profit this year is likely to be used entirely to bolster reserves against potential losses from Third World loans, bank sources said Tuesday.

If that happens, funds may be withheld from the International Development Associa-tion, the bank's concessional lending arm to the poorest nations, which usually receives $100 million to $250 million from the annual profit. The bank's profit, to be announced next week, is roughly $1.05 billion for the year ended une 30, the sources said.

According to one source, pressure to add to reserves relects concern in financial markets over an increase in the reserves have fallen because of the decline of the dollar.

The sources said that some bank directors may argue that a contribution should still be made to IDA. "But management believes the market per-ception must be dealt with first" one source said.

The action would follow recent increases in loan-loss reserves by leading U.S. and foreign commercial banks.

Discreetly, Bundesbank Makes Dollars Available

FRANKFURT - The Bundesbank has made it clear to some West German banks that it is willing to sell them dollars, but this should not be seen primarily as an attempt to cap the dollar at current levels, dealers said Tuesday. A Bundesbank spokesman declined to comment on the reports, but evidence of recent discreet dollar selling emerges from the central bank's weekly return, which indicates that net reserves have fallen over the last three weeks dealers said. Rumors that the Bundesbank and the U.S. Federal Reserve were intervening to sell dollars have repeatedly swept the market in recent weeks. Since the market can react sharply even to news that the Bundesbank is inquiring about prices, its approach to banks requires extreme discretion, dealers said.

The said the central bank's recent moves were aimed mainly at reducing dollar holdings swollen by heavy intervention earlier this year and continually replenished by interest on its 75 billion to 80 billion DM ($40.7 million to $43.4 million) foreign currency reserves, which are mainly held in dollars.

Dollar sales have two attractive side-effects for the Bundesbank, dealers noted. They would tend to brake the dollar's rise, in line with the February accord to stabilize currencies, and would restrain money supply growth by draw-ing Deutsche marks out of the market.

FRANKFURT — West Gentle ny's current account belance with the rest of the European Communi-ty was in surplus by 23 billion Deutsche marks ($12.5 billion) in 1986 after three years of deficits, the Bundesbank said in a report for release Wednesday. Current ac-count measures trade in merchandise and services. The West German central bank's report for July said the turnaround was due mainly to a fall in gasoline and natural gas prices. West Germany gets most of these products from Britan and the Netherlands. The country's current account surplus with Britain grew 72 percent from 1985 to 16.2 billion DM. The deficit with the Netherlands Prev. Yield 4.72 5.73 6.89 Prev. ## Midland Discusses Selling Greenwell Montagu Securities

ional Herald Tribune LONDON - Midland Bank PLC, Britain's third-biggest finan-cial services group, said Tuesday that it was discussing the possible sale of the institutional equity brokerage and research arm of its Greenwell Montagu subsidiary. The decision was not unexpect-ed, since Midland had stopped equity market-making in March. Analysts said that, according to market rumors, the potential buyer was a big U.S. or Japanese securities firm.

Midland would not name the

U.S. Bus Firms EASTERN CAPITAL IS YOUR BEST OPTION Sign Merger Pact

DALLAS — Greyhound Lines Inc. and troubled Trailways Corp. have signed a previously announced $80 million merger agreement, Greyhound's chairman, Fred Currey, said Tuesday.

The merger, announced June 19, leaves the United States with a single inter-city bus company. The Justice Department initially raised reservations about the transaction, but Greyhound argued Trailways would collapse unless the merger proceeded rapidly.

Greyhound will offer employment to all Trailways drivers, three-quarters of the 640 maintenance workers and all salaried employees, with the exception of some execu tives, Mr. Currey said. On Aug. 5 the merged company will reduce scheduled miles by 41,600 (67,300 kilometers), or 5.1 percent. The company also plans to offer more discount fares, Mr. Currey said.

NEW YORK — The dollar closed above 1.85 Deutsche marks Incades for the first time in six months as expectations grew for a marked improvement in the U.S. merchandise trade deficit.

The dollar ended in New York at 1.8530 DM, up more than a plennig from from 1.8425 Monday. It was the first time the dollar had closed above 1.8500 DM since

The dollar also closed at 151.255 Japanese yen, up from 151.075 Monday; at 1.5435 Swiss francs, up from 1.5380; and at 6.1650 French francs, up from 6.1325.

It was also higher against the British pound, which closed at $1.6105, against $1.6155.

Everything is pointed toward Wednesday's trade figures," said Joseph Volpicella, executive vice president of Spavo Financial Corp., a New York-based currency-trading firm

Strong Buying of Foreign Bonds

Agence France-Presse

TOKYO - Japanese institutional investors continued to buy substantial numbers of foreign bonds in July because of the stabilization of exchange rates and U.S. interest rates, the financial daily Nihon Keizai Shimbun reported Tuesday.

Quoting financial sources. it said that net purchases of foreign bonds by Japanese inves-tors totaled $2.5 billion in the week to July 8, and are expected to reach $5 billion during the first half of July. If the market remains stable, net purchases will likely top $10 billion in July, compared with $14.1 billion in June, it said.

It said Japanese investmen trust funds were buying U.S. national bonds, while non-life insurance companies were purchasing Enropean currency-denominated bonds.

ASIAN: Boom on Stock Exchanges Forces Questioning of Local Restrictions

(Continued from first finance page) Asia's New Share Capitals last month that the value of stock in such markets would grow to be-tween $500 billion and $800 billion by the end of the century.

"A major educational process is under way," said Mark Mobius, president of the Templeton Emerging Markets Fund, a $110 million vehicle launched in February. "International investors, particularly U.S. institutions and fund managers, are discovering these markets for the first time."

But there are problems that cloud a bright future and a newfound sense of confidence. Chief among these is the dearth of quality stock available in most markets, a problem exacerbated by a tendency among powerful Asian investors to keep a large proportion of issued share capital out circula-

The narrow range of most Asian markets has made them especially difficult for foreigners, since overseas investors can trade only in stocks that are sufficiently capitalized to allow for block trading and easy entry and exit. Throughout the region, this has led to two-tier trading, in which price-to-earnings ratios of stocks available to foreign investors are far higher than mar-het averages.

In Manila, for instance, there are only half a dozen stocks, according to most analysts, in which oversea fund managers would take an interest. In Knala Lumpur there are twice that number, but they are trading at multiples up to four times higher than the market as a

In markets such as Singapore and Thailand, where there are limits on the percentage of a stock foreigners as a group can hold, premiums of 5 percent to 15 percent above the market price are com-monly paid in off-market transac-

"The No. 1 challenge in all of these markets is to expand the sup-ply of tradable stock," said Marthall Auerback, a director at G.T. Management (Asia) Ltd. "Otherwise, the buyers will eventually walk away.

But the reluctance of local corporations to offer shares publicly is only part of the problem with Asia's small markets, many analysts and fund managers assert. More than anything else, they say, the underdevelopment of the markets reflects a longstanding lack of commitment from financia

If there is an exception to this pattern, it is in Seoul, the largest of Asia's junior markets. Since official efforts to develop equity trading began in the early 1980s, a group of strong Korean brokers has emerged, along with local institutions and a number of locally managed mutual funds.

In other markets, foreigners are devising new techniques to overcome the problems of underdevelopment. Several large U.S. securies houses have begun making their own markets in popular Singaporean and Malaysian stocks, for instance, which can enhance liquidity significantly.

I MUST admit that I began "The Unicorn Expedition" with a marked prejudice in its favor. There is no contemporary film director I admire more than Satyajit Ray: coming from the man who made the Apri trilogy, and a succession of equally notable movies, any collection of stories, even a disappointing one could hardly fail to have its interest. And in the event, the stories in "The Unicorn Expedition", are thoroughly engaging they would stand up are thoroughly engaging; they would stand up perfectly well by themselves, even if we knew nothing of the author.

Although Ray says that he didn't have any bent for literature when he was young, he comes from a strongly literary background. Both his father and grandfather were leading Indian children's writers; much of their work appeared in Sandesh, a monthly magazine for children.—Sandesh is the name of a popular Bengah sweetmeat.—founded by his grandfa-ther in 1913 and published by the family printing firm.

Sandesh was closed down not long after his father's death, but in 1961 Ray and a friend decided to start it up again. For the first resumected issue he produced a Bengali version of Edward Lear's poem "The Jumblies", since then he has been a regular contributor to the magazine, and the stories in "The Unicara Transition" first expected in its recommendation.

When the National Basketball Association team found its man, he was neither boled up in a cave nor lounging in a Bedonin tent nor tryng to convert a tribe of heathers, but sitting agape, chutching the arm-rests in a dentist's chair last Wednesday in Providence, Rhode Island. "Had a cavity - right molar," Rick Pitino explained later. "The dentist was about to drill when the phone rang. My wife was calling and was passing along a message that the Knicks wanted to talk to me right sway." Pitino leaped from the chair. "Wouldn't you," he said, if you had a chance to get out of hearing a tooth drilled?" having a tooth drilled?"

That evening he met for several hours with the team's brass at a hotel near Pitino's basketball camp in Massachusetts. On Thursday morning, he was offered the job. "I was caught off-guard, to say the least," said Pitino. "I didn't expect any of this to happen, not after

Recycled Soccer Players Find the Tap Root

LONDON -- Tap water in these parts is recycled 10 times. The same purified each time through the system, it is a rare sportsman who emerges uncontaminated from the murky business of trading.

Soccer has neither the means nor the will to flush out agents and parasites whose riches and rakeoffs burgeon through the ever-spinning transfer whirl. Sign today, haggle tomorrow and find the highest bidder by weekend.

The soccer world is upside down. Not long ago, players were seris told where to play, for whom and for how much. Now the precious few are playing off one potential employer against another, squeezing and squeezing until the pips squeak.

Out of the mouths of two internationals, who a year ago were home birds looking at different ho-rizons, come the ethics of our sporting times:
"I used to play for the team. I know now that you've got to be more selfish — greedy, if you like," is the gospel according to Mark Hughes, as he waits for news that might rescue him from Barcelona. "I'm not being greedy or awkward, I'm sticking up for my rights. And though I want to sign for Liverpool, I can't see it happening unless Newcastle gives me something for four years' good service," said Peter Beardsley, delaying his £1.9 million ($3.05 million) move until Newcasle met his demands for an ex gratis "loyalty" payment. Hughes, you would have thought, vas in no position to call the time. He has spent four months sitting on his butt, unwanted by Barcelona's first team. Others in his position — a seven-year contract at a minim of £250,000 per season - would take the money and run. Hughes, 23, Newcastle says there has been no "loyalty" payoff. It now has money to build new stands, but is the day coming when fans (and sponsors) will withhold their loyalties, will set their lantern jaws and disappear like fly-by-night heroes?

No one cise seems willing or able to put club or game ahead of greed and manipulation.

LeMond Has Appendectomy The Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, California - Greg LeMond, the only American ever to win the Tour de France, underwent an emergency appendectomy here Sun-day, the cyclist's sister, Karen Deller, said Tuesday.

The operation came less than three months after LeMond sustained shotgun wounds in an April 20 hunting accident. The winner of the 1986 Tour de France returned to training last month and had planned to return to competition Thursday at a four-day race in Oregon.

"We're all thinking Greg's had luck has to stop sometime," said Deller. "The appendectomy wasn't as serious, but he's gone through a lot."

Stolley, who as managing editor of Life magazine assigned to Mark many of her most important stories, refers to her as "one of the top three or four in the world" and adds, "She is probably the best — how can I put this without sounding sexist? -I don't know of another woman photojournalist as good as she around the world (1974); "Ward. 81," about women in a mental hospital (1979), and "Photo-graphs of Mother Teresa's Mis-sions of Charity in Calcutta" (1985) -have been in black and Gifted with an occentric visual imagination, she likes unlikely angles, perilous balances and large, empty spaces in which an isolated figure carries the emotional charge of an exclamation mark. After taking a bachelor-of-fine-arts degree in painting and art history and deciding she wasn't good enough to be a painter, Mark took a master-of-arts de-University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg School of Communications, having chosen photography almost at random and fallen in love with the camers the moment she held one in her hand.

From the very first night, that was it," she says. "It was word. I became obsessed by it. I knew immediately it would be my life's work. I knew I had a chance of being good at it."

Her deep commitment to stoomalous in the career of a ries about people on the edge only man whose three other books began in 1976, on Ward 81. "For years I'd planned to live in a mental hospital," she says. "I wanted to see if I could feel something of what it was like to be set aside from society." No one was willing to fund such a project, so she traveled to the Oregon State Hospital at her own expense to live for 36 days in the state's only locked ward for women. "I think I was interested because my father had several nervous breakdowns and was hospitalized several times." she says. "But beyond that, in third grade we took a class trip to a mental hospital. I never forgot that. It was fascinating to me. Had I ever had a scientific mind I would have loved being a psychia-

She never photographs anyone who refuses ("I'm too shy"), and she claims to be equally good at sensing when she can shoot and when she should not. Recently she was photographing Robert, an autistic child, when the boy's eyes suddenly rolled up and his arms flailed like malfunctioning machinery: an epileptic seizure.
"I didn't shoot," says Mark. "It was very dramatic, but I just couldn't. I felt terrible for the mother and grandmother, and for the boy too. He knew I was there, and he didn't like it. If anything, I'm too meek. If anything, I'm Yet she steels herself to take pictures when that seems almost impossible. "Somehow in Ethio-pia I thought, 'How can I live with myself? People are dying.' But you feel you have to do it. I think that's the compensation for your-self: I'm recording an event that's important, an event that people should see. We tell ourselves that all the time. There's something shameless about me. And I think those pictures — there's some-thing shameless about all of us.

This kind of work, sometimes it's a discuse that gets into the blood. The drive is stronger than I am. Fortunately or unfortunately, I suppose I'm connected to my camera for the rest of my life."

U.S. Tax Collectors Seize Girl's Piggybank Savings The Internal Revenue Service has seized a 9-year-old girl's piggy.

bank savings to pay her grandfather's back taxes, relatives say. The IRS notified the family of Carmin Fisher in Junction City, Oklahoma, that the agency had ordered a bank to turn over $70.76 the fourth-grad. er had deposited in an account in her and her grandmother's names. She had collected pennies from her grandparents and other family members, along with pennies she, found on the street or earned from returning bottles and cans. "That's more than 7,000 pennies, many years savings for a little girl, her grandfather, Charles Fisher, said Monday. Fisher said he owes back taxes, but he said the government had no right to take away the savings his granddaughter had been dropping into a piggybank made out of a coffee can since she was 2 years old. Steve Matthews, an IRS spokesman, said it is not the government's policy to take money from people who do not owe the debt. He suggested the Fishers call the IRS and explain what hapened. The girl's grandmother, Bettye Fisher, said she tried that but she was put on bold, then was told to submit a standard complaint form.

Bette Midler will appeal the dis-missal of her $10 million lawsuit against Ford Motor Co. for using a voice that sounded similar to hers in a commercial, her lawyer says. U.S. District Judge Ferdinand F. Ferusadez ruled in favor of Ford on Monday as well as Young and Rubicam, the agency that produced the ad.

The ABC "World News Tonight" anchorman Peter Jennin has separated from the writer Kati Marton, his wife of eight years, ABC said. Sylvester Stallone has filed for divorce from his wife, Brightte Nielsen, citing irreconcilable differences.

At least two writers for The New Yorker magazine have followed the magazine's retired editor, William Shawn, to Farrar, Strans & Giroux.
Roger Strace said Shawn aireads has acquired books by The New Yorker writer Edith Ighmer and The New Yorker contributor Life
